Ludwig von Mises Institute

The Mises University is the world's leading instructional program in the Austrian School of economics. Since 1986, it has been the essential training ground for economists who are looking beyond the mainstream.

Rooted in the tradition of Carl Menger and Ludwig von Mises, as well as Murray Rothbard and F.A. Hayek, the Austrian School offers a rigorous and logical approach to economics that gives free markets their due and takes full account of the reality of human choice. More than a field within economics, the Austrian School is an entirely different approach that dissents from the mainstream on method, theory, and policy. It views economic actors as unique, conscious, and freely choosing individuals, not as undifferentiated data to be manipulated mathematically or politically.

Subject areas cover market behavior, competition, value and utility, money and banking, business cycles, industrial organization, method, economic history, the philosophy of science, financial economics, and more.

There's even a primer on surviving graduate school. You attend the sessions that most suit your interests and level of advancement. Nightly social hours allow time to meet and discuss with faculty and other students. The program ends with an optional exam for an honors certificate. Details are available at mises.org/upcoming.asp.

Some very good news for those students who attend the Mises University!

The student who emerges from the oral examinations (the Mündliche Prüfung) with the best record, as chosen by the examining committee, will be awarded the Douglas E. French Scholarship Prize of $2,500.

The second highest score will receive the George and Joele Eddy Prize of $1,500.

Scholarships Available!

Full-time students in any discipline can apply now at mises.org/studentschol.asp to receive a scholarship covering full tuition, meals, study materials, and housing. Faculty may also attend, and there are a limited number of Member Observer places. See mises.org for registration details.
