from the Ludwig von Mises Institute

MARGARET "PEG" ROWLEY FELLOWSHIPS at the Ludwig von Mises Institute—for the summer, a semester, or even a year—are available for outstanding graduate students, ABDs, and post-docs interested in research in the Austrian School of economics and classical liberalism. In addition, Rowley Summer Internships are available for superior undergraduates.

Visiting fellowships and internships cover housing and utilities plus a generous monthly stipend, adjustable according to circumstances. They are available for the summer or the academic year.

Margaret L. "Peg" Rowley (1924–2000) was a television star, tobacco store entrepreneur, and great benefactor of the Mises Institute.

For more information, see www.mises.org/fellow.asp. To apply, send a letter of application, résumé, relevant transcripts (unofficial), one to three letters of recommendation, and published and unpublished papers on problems and topics related to the Austrian School and classical liberalism.
